WT to appeal for extra funds for safety gear

West Texas State University will request this week that the governor allocate emergency funds to cover the installation of fire safety equipment in the old administration building which was damaged by fire early Monday.

Hermas Miller, financial vice president, said he will ask the governor's office to pay not only for the damage caused by last week's fire but also for fire escapes and a full sprinkler system for fire protection in the building.

He said he may also travel to Austin this week to formally present the request for emergency funding "in case they have any questions about it."

Representatives of the governor's office were on campus Wednesday to survey the damage caused by the early Monday fire which started in a basement room of the old structure and destroyed the university's telephone system.

Miller said the governor's representatives were unsure how much funding is available in a special $500,000 annual appropriation fund for such emergency expenditures.

He said word on whether the emergency funds will be allocated as requested should come this week.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe last week end — just two days before the fire — vetoed a $290,000 appropriation to WTSU for remodeling the structure. The funding was to go for repainting, but it was also to go for renovation of the fire safety system and for the addition of external fire escapes.

There is currently no fire safety system in the building. Standpipe type fire extinguishers throughout the building have no water and no hoses. Some have no nozzles.

A three-story north wing of the building, which was converted to classroom facilities in 1969, was placed off-limits for classes last spring by Miller. The wing is of all-wood construction and some faculty members have complained that should a fire break out students would have only limited access to exit.

If the university receives emergency funding for the reconstruction of the damaged basement area of the structure, it will be the third time in about two years that such funding has been allocated to replace buildings burned by fire.

Two years ago, the WTSU practice field fieldhouse was destroyed by fire and last fall the Nance Ranch pavilion burned to the ground.

While the university was without telephone service a part of the day Monday, limited phone service was reinstated by Southwestern Bell by mid-week and by the end of the week about 60 lines were open to WTSU offices.

Exhibits, parade, barbecue, fireworks set

Big Fourth fete planned here

A Fourth of July celebration as multi-hued as the fireworks display which will end it awaits Canyon residents Friday.

The Canyon-Randall County Bicentennial Committee has joined with the Chamber of Commerce to sponsor a full afternoon of everything from a parade to good food and fireworks.

The activities will begin at 5 p.m. Friday with a parade through the business district to Conner Park.

Weldon Trice, chamber president, said 30 entries are expected for the parade, which will begin west of the business district on 4th Avenue.

U. S. Rep. Jack Hightower is expected to be in the parade along with other local elected officials and a German oom-pah band.

In addition, the bicentennial committee will sponsor a pet parade and a bike decorating contest during the parade. All pets entered in the pet parade must be on leash or held the length of the parade route. Those entering the pet parade or the bike decorating contest will gather at the First National Bank parking lot prior to the 5 p.m. start. A Pioneer Day theme has been set for the bike decorating contest. Winners of both contests will be awarded prizes.

The parade will proceed down 4th Avenue east to 19th Street and then will turn south for the trek to Conner Park.

The Chamber of Commerce will host a barbecue with all the trimmings at Conner Park beginning at 6 p.m. Cost is $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12 years of age.

County Judge Woody Pond will again supervise the cooking of the barbecue. Canyon First National Bank and West Texas State Bank donated funds to provide 1000 pounds of beef for the event.

Just as the barbecue is getting underway at the park, 15 exhibits will open under the sponsorship of the bicentennial committee.

The exhibits will feature early-day activities of the Panhandle heritage.

The Canyon Study Club will sponsor one exhibit depicting games for adults and children from the early settlement days.

The Jowell 4-H Club will provide an exhibit showing how to use a washboard to wash clothes. The club will also set an early-day kitchen table.

The Heritage Woman's Club will sponsor a quilting and embroidery exhibit and will sell quilt blocks with family names for a quilt to go into the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum.

The American Association of University Women and the Canyon Classroom Teachers Association will sponsor an early-day classroom scene.

Margaret McCampbell, West Texas State University art teacher, will make pottery as part of the exhibits.

Beth Nelson will weave on a four heddle loom.

The Take-Off-Pounds-Sensibly club will sponsor an exhibit in which they will make and sell beef jerky.

Another home demonstration club will make soap and will hold a drawing for homemade soap bars.

The University Study Club will make butter in another exhibit. The Canyon Dames will illustrate Indian-style beading.

The Sue Hite Club will sell lemonade and cookies.

The Canyon Rotary Club will have horses and a horse-shoeing exhibit.

Wives, Etc. will exhibit writing with a quill pen.

The Canyon Capers Square Dance Club is expected to square dance in one exhibit area.

The exhibits will be open from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday in the area of Conner Park under the trees.

In addition to those exhibits, several individuals will operate a Trader's Fair near the monument on the northeast corner of the park lot. A $5 fee will be charged by the bicentennial committee for those wishing to trade in the trader's fair. Traders must bring their own tables and may set up their wares after 3 p.m. Funds collected through fees will pay for prizes for various contests planned next school year.

The Lucius Penick post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Canyon will host a free watermelon feed just before the fireworks display Friday night at the park.

Then, about 9:30 p.m., H.R. Fulton, Jr. will set off the first fireworks display in the field just west of the park.

World Championship Pony Express Races, sponsored in the past by the Randall County Sheriff's Posse, will not be held this year.

The posse will sponsor a junior rodeo on July 12.

Senior citizens raise funds to purchase church building

The 200-member Canyon Senior Citizens Association is expected to have its own building this week.

The senior citizens have completed one fund-raising drive to raise $22,500 for purchase of the old First Christian Church, and are initiating another one to help pay for remodeling and furnishing costs.

Dutch Cleavinger, president of the group, said formal purchase of the building from the University Church of Christ is tentatively set for this week.

"We've got enough to pay for the building," Cleavinger said

Friday. The month fund-raising drive came to a close to pay for the purchase.

He said the funds raised through the drive amount to "just enough to cover the building costs."

While the senior citizens may purchase the building this week, they will probably not move into the structure until August or September, Cleavinger said. The interim will be spent on remodeling and furnishing the old church building at 5th Avenue and 18th Street.

"This is just the starting place," Cleavinger said of the purchase of the building. "We need furnishings and we're thinking about renovation projects."

Another garage sale at the church is planned in mid-August to help raise funds for the remodeling and furnishing.

The purchase of the building will come just a year after the Canyon Senior Citizens Association was formed here.

About 20 persons attended an organizational meeting of the group last summer and set plans in motion for another called meeting at the Canyon community center, which for the past year has been the CSCA's headquarters.

The membership of the group has grown steadily since the first meeting and the most ambitious project of the group has been the fund-raising drive for the building.

For more than six months before the fund-raising drive began, leaders of the group met numerous times with federal and local officials to seek outside funding for the building.

At each turn, they found the road blocked as they learned that federal programs will help them maintain existing buildings but

Housing starts head for record as first half of year closes

After a brief slump in 1974, new housing starts are well on their way to a new annual record in Canyon.

Construction was begun on 41 homes — most costing around $22,000 — during the first six months of 1975, far surpassing the starts during the same period in 1974 and the record year of 1973.

While housing starts are on the increase, the dollar total for building permits issued through city hall are down.

This is apparently due to the scale-down in size and cost of homes now under construction in the city.

The average cost of an under-construction home during the first six months of 1975 has been about $20,000. That compares to an average cost of homes begun during the first six months of 1974 of $39,262. The average cost per home during a similar period of 1973 was $26,857.

Twenty-six building permits were issued for home construction during the first half of 1974 and 30 were issued during the first half of 1973.

Total dollar amount of building permits issued during the first six months of 1975 was down by about a half million dollars from a $1.4 million total in the first six months of 1974.

During 1973, construction was begun on 68 residences, a record number of housing starts in any one year, according to Building Code Enforcement Officer Jerry Lenhick. In 1972, 43 residences were issued permits at an average cost of about $23,400 per home. And, in 1971, 43 residences were issued permits at an average cost of about $19,350.

June has been the big month so far this year in terms of new housing starts with 12 new homes begun. Six of the new homes are under construction in the Davis-Hooper addition and six are under construction in Hunsley Hills.

Permits for June totalled $241,500.

In May, six residences went under construction at a total cost of $137,300. Permits issued during the month totalled $208,100. That compares with a permit total of $287,300 in May 1974, $293,700 in May 1973, and $154,300 in May 1972.

Ten residences went under construction during April for a total of $221,500. Permits for the month totalled $268,600 to compare with $268,600 in April 1974. (See STARTS, Page 3)

White says more funds needed for energy probe

Funding of research programs for the development of solar and wind energy must be accelerated and given a top priority, Texas Agriculture Commissioner John White told energy symposium participants Thursday here.

"We are going to have to put the development of energy resources on the same priority we did the development of the so-called atom bomb back in the 40's," White said. "Funding to resource institutions and universities must be accelerated."

White was keynote speaker at a symposium to discuss alternative energy sources for rural operations. The symposium was sponsored at West Texas State University by the physics department and the Panhandle Economic Program.

White said the nation will respond to the challenge of providing more funds for the development of alternative energy sources "if they feel it is a real challenge and not just taking advantage of a crisis situation for higher profits."

While the universities' research fields might anticipate more funding for development of alternative energy sources, White said it is also their responsibility to convince the public that the energy shortage is a real threat in this country.

That responsibility falls on research professors, he said, because the public simply does not believe what it is told by oil companies and state and federal officials.

White said a public opinion poll taken by a reputable national polling organization for the Governor's Energy Council indicates that the least credible source of information on the energy situation is energy and oil companies. The second least credible is federal officials and the third least credible is state officials.

"The most credible are the local officials and people with

Methodist church board okays Viet family here

The administrative board of the First United Methodist Church here has voted unanimously to sponsor a Vietnamese refugee family for resettlement in Canyon.

The Rev. Bill Kent, pastor of the church, said the administrative board's action was taken after a recommendation from the church's council on ministries.

"Both groups had nothing but enthusiasm," he said.

Dr. Emmett Smith, chairman of the council on ministries, said the local church will work through the United Methodist Committee on Relief to obtain a family for resettlement here.

He said the family should be in Canyon within six weeks.

He said the church has found both housing — at the Lynette Apartments — and employment — at the local school district — for the family.

Smith said he has told the national church group the local church feels a family of four would be an appropriate size for the city and that a family from a smaller town might adjust better to Canyon than a family from one of Vietnam's larger cities.

Another Canyon church has indicated an interest in helping a refugee family resettle, but has taken no formal action.

The board of deacons at First Presbyterian Church is studying the possibility of resettling a family here.

In the bleachers, the action is apparently more strenuous than on the field in Canyon Little League baseball as mothers gesticulate with the balls and strikes.

Governor should give safety funds

Everybody knows Governor Briscoe didn't know last week end when he cut $290,000 from West Texas State University's budget that the amount would provide badly needed fire safety equipment for the antiquated old administration building.

If the governor desired to avoid the conclusionary view that he is strictly arbitrary in his line-item vetoes — or at least that he was arbitrary in the veto of the ad building remodeling fund — he would, of necessity, have to admit that he is somehow and for some reason against the safety of WTSU students and faculty members who must attend class and office in the building.

Since it is unlikely the governor would be so capricious, it is unlikely he knew what he was doing.

Notwithstanding the point that the governor should have known what he was doing, his staff should have known what he was doing.

By vetoing the $290,000 appropriation for the renovation of the building, Briscoe has set himself up to become the fall guy should a major fire or other type disaster strike the building.

Hermas Miller, financial vice president for WTSU, says he'll travel to Austin this week to personally see through channels an emergency appropriation request of the governor asking for funds for replacement of equipment damaged by last Monday's fire and funds for safety equipment.

It is documented that the building is unsafe. Standpipes originally designed to provide water to mobile type fire extinguishers don't work. Classrooms in the north wings of the building are ill-conceived in escape design and ill-constructed of wood. Professors tell with no little trepidation of teaching large classes as the floor creaked under their feet.

That WTSU has a history of damage-causing fires is documented. That it is chock full of hazards which create potential fire situations is also documented.

The governor should, this time around, look at the evidence. He'll be convinced WTSU has a genuine need for funding over and above any he might be inclined to approve to replace fire-damaged property. — C.W.

Churches take lead

Some things even the federal government recognizes it cannot handle well.

One of those things is the resettlement of Vietnamese refugees, who are now camped in Arkansas and California.

It is good to see the government, which has a tradition of messing up everything it steps in, step aside in this instance and allow an American institution which is uniquely able to handle the situation take over.

It appears America's churches have provided the wherewithal to take on themselves the resettlement of the refugees and their integration into American life.

In Canyon, two churches are seriously considering — and one has actually taken concrete action — sponsoring Vietnamese families for resettlement here.

Their humanitarian efforts speak well of the people of Canyon. — C.W.

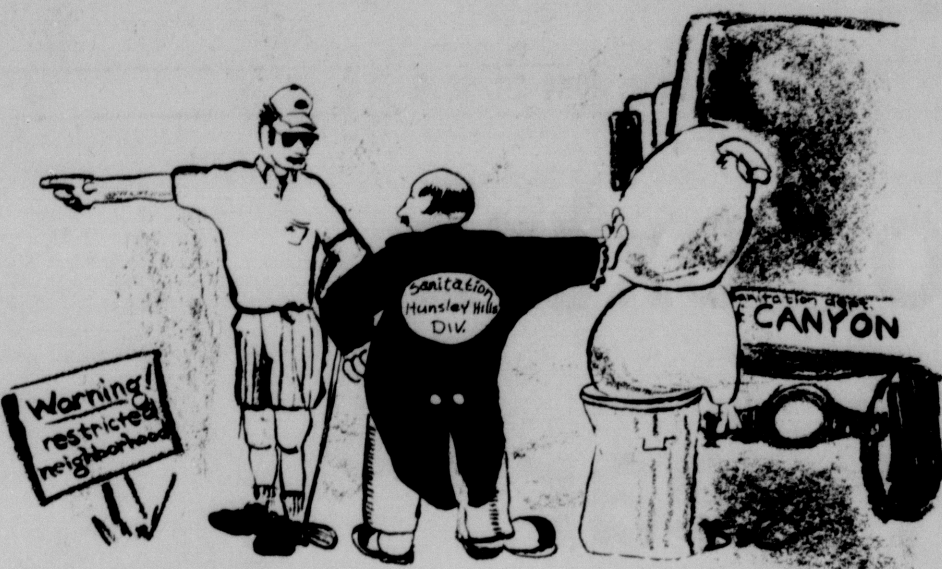

Good or bad?

Things could be worse department: If those blue thunderheads which seem to gather almost nightly over Randall County make you nervous, take heed of some research accomplished several years ago by a West Texas State University physicist.

In studying the dispersement of reported tornadoes or funnel clouds in the Panhandle region, Dr. Vaughan Nelson found that during the time records have been kept of such things, Canyon has never been hit by an observed and confirmed tornado.

Things could be better department: Dr. Nelson doesn't know why a tornado has never hit Canyon.

Providing there is not some natural explanation for this strange phenomenon, one might speculate that the probability of a tornado hitting the city increases with each blue thunderhead. — C.W.

Our world

We should invest more in enduring art

By ANN BROWN
Everyone is — or needs to be — an artist at something.

The successful homemaker (the cradle of all the arts) is an artist at making her family physically, spiritually, and emotionally comfortable.

The bread winner must be an artist at his work or it is drudgery.

The teacher is an artist in communications or the students learn with difficulty — if at all.

The preacher is an artist when he conveys the love of God to a spiritually starving world.

The doctors and nurses who dedicate their lives to healing the hurts of humanity are artists in human compassion.

The good musician is an artist who brings joy to the heart of every listener.

The true scientist is an artist who probes the secrets of the universe for the good of mankind.

The competent writer is an artist at conveying ideas through word pictures.

The painter and the sculptor are artists if they can reproduce the beauties of Nature on canvas and clay.

The builder is an artist when he transforms dreams into wood and brick and stone. He provides enduring pictures that bring joy to the hearts of the possessors and passers-by as long as his creation stands.

The engineer is an artist when he frees man from the limitations civilization naturally places upon him.

The farmer is an artist who combines soil and seeds to produce food to load the world's tables.

The newsmen who objectively reports significant facts in an interesting manner is an artist in communication.

The technician is the artist who serves his fellows like salt and like light: unnoticed, unappreciated, and unsung.

The successful executive is an artist at delegating authority.

Statenmanship is an art as sacrificial as that of the minister or the doctor.

The art of the military man enables the rest of us to live in freedom from foreign enemies.

Only the art of the policeman provides a measure of domestic tranquility.

Perhaps the artist whose art is most enjoyed and most ignored is the cook. What pleasure good cooks add to our daily lives.

The good repairman is an artist at keeping the wheels of industry greased. (He is also wonderful around the house).

The gardener is an artist when he brings order and loveliness to the landscape. It is beauty shared and enjoyed by all observers.

Occasionally someone insists, "I'm no good at anything." But that is true only if one wishes it to be so.

All of God's creatures have something to add to the world. Even a puppy or a kitten can bring endless joy to the hearts of little children, invalids, or lonely old people.

Anyone who tries to live with no worthy purpose in life may find survival impossible.

Everyone has some kind of talent. To be happy, one must discover, develop, and use that talent to make the world a better place for his having passed through it.

Webster defines art as "skill in performance, acquired by experience, study, or observation."

One seldom becomes skilled at anything until he acquires too much self respect to turn out a second-rate product or give a poor performance.

Because "art is long, and time is fleeting" would it not be profitable to invest more of our transient time in our enduring arts?

Two men significant to the history of this area were Quanah Parker, Chief of the Comanches, and Col. Charles Goodnight, first settler in the Panhandle. Their friendship is reflected in two letters written by the Chief to the Colonel, the first undated, as follows:

Cache, Oklahoma
Captain Charles Goodnight,
Goodnight, Texas.

My dear Friend:

In reply to your inquiry as to my father's and my own history, I will state that I cannot tell you when or where my father was born. From the best information I have, I was born about 1850 on Elk Creek just below the Wichita Mountains. My first recollection of my parents dates back to a few years before the battle on Pease River, Dec. 18, 1860, between Gov. L. S. Ross and a part of a band of Comanches that was under my father's command; my recollection is that there were about fourteen of our people killed in this fight and two escaping. My father was not there, but my mother, Cynthia Ann Parker and another of my father's wives were there. My mother was made prisoner and the other wife of my father was killed in the fight. My mother was brought back to Texas and restored to her people. Subsequently, she went to Anderson County and there, she and my sister, Prairie Flower, age ten years, both died in 1870. At the time of the battle on Pease River, my father was suffering from a wound received many years before in a battle before the fall of Parkers Fort in 1836. When the Pease River fight took place, my father with the main body of Indians was about seventy or eighty miles away with his Indian wife, my brother and myself. He knew nothing of the fight until the two survivors of the last named fight returned to the camp and informed him of the great disaster which had befallen his people. The main camp of my father, Nocona, was on the west bank of the Pease River close to a little creek of fresh water, it being a branch of the middle Pease River. I remained with my father from this time until his death which occurred two or three years later. I was with him and saw him die, and he was buried near the Antelope Hills in what I now believe is in Lipscomb County near the south bank of the Canadian River, meaning the South Canadian. Before the death of my father, he told me that my mother was a white woman, that he took her into captivity from central or east Texas when she was a child. There were born to her three children, myself being the oldest, a brother who died at an early age, named Peanuts, and my sister who was an infant in her arms when she was captured by Gov. Ross' men. What I state in regard to the death of my father is from my own personal knowledge and recollection which is now as clear in my mind as though it happened yesterday, and there is not a possibility of there being any error in regard to it. I know that Gov. Ross was honest in his belief that he had killed my father in that fight, but he was mistaken in regard to it.

After the death and capture of my father's wives, he became very morose and unhappy, and I have seen him shed many tears over it. The object of this letter is not to detract a single honor won by Gov. Ross. He was a brave and honorable foe, and the sod of Texas never covered a purer or nobler heart. During his life he sent me a large beautiful picture of my mother for which I feel deeply indebted to him. If he were living today, I know that he would be glad to know the truth regarding this matter which will necessarily occupy a prominent place in the history of Texas for all time to come.

He wants out of job but commission balks

By CARROLL WILSON
Ruddy-faced, hulking Bob McClendon must have started it all as a lark.

Undoubtedly, he must now wish he hadn't bothered.

McClendon presented himself in such a way in early 1974 that it was almost impossible to tell whether he was joking or serious when he announced he would seek the Democratic nomination as county treasurer.

McClendon, who presents himself to a jury in the same style and same tone utilized with uncommon success by his former mentor George Dowlen, was a successful Amarillo attorney.

An over-six-footer who gave up smoking and then got hooked on snuff, McClendon smiled only slightly when he announced his candidacy and added with a certain amount of comic timing that his only platform would be to work for the abolition of the office once he had attained it.

It must be a lark, political observers told each other, because there was Bob McClendon minding his own business, working at his law office, messing around with his kids, and almost other candidates for political office were burning up the shoe leather and wearing their hands raw to attain county offices.

McClendon had a no-sweat campaign, and he approached it with the confidence of a man who can't lose.

While McClendon couldn't lose because he had nothing to lose, he had yet to learn that he couldn't win either. But, county commissioners have made that point clear.

Anyway, McClendon got the Democratic nomination, without paying out a single dime for campaign cards or advertisements.

Then, as his Republican opponent Marty Schantz, an Amarillo school teacher, shifted into high gear for a late summer and fall campaign, McClendon became, if anything, more unconcerned.

He was cheerful and unbelieving at the county convention, and told reporters he planned the ultimate in a low-key campaign. He planned no campaign at all.

Remarkably, McClendon wound up with the county treasurer's job November as he sent Mrs. Schantz back to the schoolhouse in the general election.

He was flabbergasted. But, on the appropriate day, McClendon showed up for work at the courthouse. And, almost immediately he carried through on his promise to try to get his job abolished.

Elimination of a county office is no simple business, as McClendon learned.

Operating a county office, which for all practical purposes should be eliminated, is no easy business, either.

Almost from the start, McClendon ran into trouble with the county commission, which takes county government more seriously than anybody else in the county.

First, the commissioners refused to allow McClendon to pay — that's right, pay — the expenses to have an outside telephone line put into his office for his private use.

Then, they first refused and then agreed, after a show of deep chagrin, to pay a month's salary to Mrs. Ruth Hill, former county treasurer who McClendon had hired for a 30-day period to help him learn the ways of his office.

While he hasn't said so, McClendon is said to feel that he was sabotaged when he attempted to get out the January paychecks and as a result of the sabotage the checks came out several days late.

For awhile, after McClendon announced to commissioners he had shuffled the county's certificates of deposit around so they were all drawing maximum interest, the commissioners seemed content that McClendon would work out alright.

But, then, he began working up a piece of legislation to have his office abolished and the air turned sour again. County commissioners announced they would not support his efforts.

And, Rep. Bob Simpson announced he would introduce the legislation but wouldn't support it, either.

McClendon finds it hard to fathom those two events.

"I ran on a platform to abolish this office and I was elected by the people to abolish the office," he has said, noting that it's more than strange that what the people want the county commissioners, who are also to represent the people, don't want.

Then, a couple of months ago, commissioners decided McClendon should take on more responsibility for operating the finances of the county, and they decided to turn bookkeeping over to him.

McClendon bullied his neck and refused to become the bookkeeper unless the county would hire another hand for his office.

Commissioners bullied their neck and the thing has been in a stalemate ever since.

County commissioners' responses to McClendon raise a couple of questions: (1) are they mad at McClendon because he won election without really trying (2) are they mad at him because he wants to reduce the county bureaucracy by one office (3) are they mad at him because he beat a Republican, or (4) are they just mad in general at him?

Their reactions also lead to some conclusions.

The most vociferous opponent of McClendon's suggestions and operations has been Republican Commissioner John Fulgenzi. He's been joined by Republican Commissioner Dee Griffin, and at times by Democrat Commissioner Jim Fletcher.

It might be a reasonable conclusion that the two Republicans are irritated because McClendon won over a Republican without down not only his payment, and cut-off fee but an extra five dollars as he said, "Here's a little extra for your trouble." He then disappeared like the masked stranger.

It took several minutes for us to realize my friend had been tipped. Tips are unheard of at city hall.

To that masked stranger my heart goes out on behalf of all the little people just doing their jobs. May we all take heart that someone cares.

P.S. Although I must report I credit to that

Dear Carroll:

I'd like to take this opportunity to again thank and commend the Canyon Fire Department for their superb job in extinguishing the blaze in the old administration building early Monday morning. CANYON CLEARING HOUSE

Canyon's Churchlife

Dr. Pat Sullivan will be the guest speaker for the morning worship service at First Christian Church today. Dr. Sullivan is the chairman of the board of the congregation.

A free-lance writer, Eugene White from Amarillo, will be the guest speaker at Calvary Baptist Church today. White has pastored several churches and is a member of Trinity Baptist Church in Amarillo.

At the recommendation of the Council on Ministries, the Administrative Board of the First United Methodist Church voted to sponsor a Vietnamese family as a part of the work of the United Methodist Committee on Relief.

Requirements for sponsoring such a family include (1) providing a job for the head of the household, (2) providing adequate housing, and (3) willingness on the part of the people of the church to assist the family in becoming settled in their new environment.

The church has met the requirements by securing a job at the public schools and a place to live in the Lynette Apartments.

The First Christian Church will hold an Elders retreat during the month of August for training and planning of ministries by their eldership for the coming year. The Retreat will be led by Rev. White and Gus Miller, chairman of the elders. They hope to provide an opportunity for spiritual growth and commitment for the leaders of their congregation.

Today is Promotion Sunday at Calvary Baptist Church for Sunday School and Training Union. The bell will ring at 10:35 at which time those promoting will go to the new departments and new teachers will go to their particular class or department.

Early morning worship services for First United Methodist Church will begin July and be held through the months of July and August until August 31.

The early service will begin at 8:30, Church School at 9:30, and Morning worship at 10:45.

The proposed date for the First Baptist Church to be back in their remodeled building is August 17. The Building committee will inspect the building on August 15 to make a final determination.

A Children's Church for preschoolers has begun recently at Calvary Baptist Church under the direction of Mrs. R.G. Price. The children will be able to hear Bible stories they can understand and sing songs they know. The Children's Church meets in the 4 year old department during the worship service.

The junior high and high school youth of First Baptist Church will be leaving Sunday School early today, at 10:35, so that all can attend worship services in the Canyon. Everyone is to bring their sack lunch and FBC will furnish drinks for a dinner on the grounds right after the services. Transportation will be provided.

Retiring Army General To Become Canyon Resident

An Army brigadier general who has served in every rank from private to general officer and who received the nation's second highest award for battlefield courage will be moving to Canyon next month.

Brig. Gen. Anthony F. Daskevich, currently deputy commanding general of the U. S. Army Tank-Automotive Command at Warren, Mich., will retire June 30 and return to his home state of Texas after more than 34 years of service with the Army.

The most decorated general ever to serve at the command, Daskevich was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross (DSC) for extraordinary heroism while serving in Germany during World War II as a lieutenant assigned to the 753rd Tank Battalion.

The general has also twice received the Silver Star, has three Legion of Merit awards, two Purple Hearts, the Bronze Star, Army Commendation Medal and other service ribbons and battle stars.

A native of Mingus, Tex., Daskevich entered the Army as an enlisted man in 1941. He moved through the ranks rapidly and was a first sergeant when he received a battlefield commission as a second lieutenant in October, 1944.

The retiring general is married to the former Marie Louise Gallagher. Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Gallagher, parents of Mrs. Daskevich, now live in Canyon.

expertise in colleges," he said. If funding and support is to be had for the job of finding alternative sources to fossil fuels, those with the most credibility must insure that they tell the story to their communities, a story of fast-depleting energy supplies, he said.

"I hope not only that your work can develop increased capacities for energy but that you accept the additional responsibility to preach the gospel to the public," White said.

For many Americans, questions about the energy crisis and its reality still remain and those questions must be answered, White said.

"The people eventually make the ultimate decision and they must support more research," he said. "It's important that energy processors and users come to the people with the real story."

Other participants on the symposium panel noted Thursday the lack of funding for research projects, and the advantages of the Texas Panhandle for contracted research particularly in solar and wind energy systems.

Dr. Earl Gilmore, professor of physics at Amarillo College, noted the results of a study conducted by himself and Dr. Vaughan Nelson, physics department head at WTSU, which indicate that the Panhandle is the windiest area in the nation and the prime location for wind energy conversion tests.

"There is a very large amount of energy, sufficient to take care of our needs for a good long while," Gilmore said. "But, it's not a simple matter to use the energy."

Gilmore indicated more research is needed on energy storage systems for wind energy conversion.

Dr. Nelson noted that the Panhandle lies within an area of the nation which receives about the most consistent sunlight and that makes the area a prime location for solar energy usage.

"Year-round, in terms of solar energy, we're in the second best area of the nation," he said. "So, when that's coupled with wind energy, we're in good shape. This is another energy source we should be looking at for agricultural purposes."

Gilmore pointed out in another presentation, that federal financial support for wind energy is low — totalling about 3.2 percent of the total grant budget of the National Science Foundation during the year. Likewise, he said, funding for projects to provide energy for rural and agricultural uses is low.

expanding a dime and without shaking hands. After all, could there be anything more distasteful to a politician who had to work hard in his campaign and spend a good deal of money, than a politician who did neither and still got elected? It just ain't cricket.

It might also be reasonable to conclude the two are mad because McClendon beat a Republican. After all, there are only four Republicans in the courthouse and another one wouldn't hurt the party.

It might also be a reasonable conclusion that commissioners don't want to see their domain diminished, even by one office.

In fact, McClendon has been right these many months. There is absolutely no need for the county treasurer in Randall County. Commissioners have for years been hiring an outside auditing firm to audit the county's books and the county auditor has been acting more as a treasurer than an auditor for many years also.

At any rate, commissioners in their recalcitrance are subverting the will of the people in not backing the abolition of the office and are costing the same taxpayers several thousand dollars a year by keeping the office around.

It may be a bitter pill for them to swallow the fact, but McClendon is right. If their interests are with the people, they should recognize that and help McClendon dismantle a domain he didn't want to build in the first place.

will not help in the purchase price.

The executive board of the group has laid plans for use of the church building for the association membership.

As envisioned now, the building will be open daily and the association will eventually provide hot meals at lunch for members.

The basement area of the building is to be used for kitchen and games while the upstairs sanctuary area is to be used for large-group activities.

Until they move into the church building, the CSCA will continue to meet at 7 p.m. Thursdays at the community center for a covered dish meal and games.

and I wish you would tell the town people that I am going to make a speech for them and give them a war dance, and there will be about fifty or more Indians that will be with me that time.

I want to know how far is Mr. Burnett's ranch on the Dickson Creek.

I am coming through on a wagon, and I am going to camp close to your house.

Mr. Charlie, I want you to help me with my mother's property, and I wrote to Mr. Burnett and told him to help me, and I want you to write to your representative at Austin and tell him to look the matter up for me, and I know you are the only man who knows anything about it, and I am getting old and I am not able to do anything much and will be glad if you will do this for me.

I am going to bring some old Indians to your place and see your buffaloes and make these old Indians glad.

Yours truly,
Quannah Parker

An Open Letter to my Parents Mr. and Mrs. Alfred S. Hamblen

When you announced you would be celebrating your 50th wedding anniversary this year my first reaction was total disbelief. Surely you jest. You're getting senile. I'll start looking for a good geriatric physician in your area. Why it was only a little while ago that — and reality began to sink in. I have maneuvered thru 29 of these anniversaries myself, therefore, I guess it is possible after all. A crisis clinic was established at home to care for the situation.

Upon recovery I started reflecting upon my recollections of your life together. Memories hidden in the back side of the subconscious which helped set a precedent for the 5 of us offspring and our future.

I remember some very lean times, sad times, and very happy and comfortable times.

While we were living in the South Plains area I remember one of our very infrequent shopping sprees in Floydada and while visiting a park a man counted us kids one by one, shook his head, scowled his displeasure and let you know in no uncertain terms that you had too many kids. You, mother, fumed and fussed and gathered us all up and prepared us for the trip back to the farm. All this time daddy was ranting and snorting deleted expletives, finally ending with "it was none of his damned business how many kids we have." This has always been one of the memories I cherish most because it demonstrated your real love for all of us and made us feel we were really wanted. I could rattle on and on about the many hair-raising situations connected with rearing such a rowdy bunch but you'd just get depressed so will let well enough alone at this point.

Anyhow, we grew up coddled in the inner depths of my soul, as we matured but averted nervous breakdowns and have witnessed our eventual stability; branching out on our own, getting married, raising our own children and your grandchildren and at this point, great grandchildren.

You've watched us struggle with our successes and frustrations and always seemed to be on hand to help or give support when needed. You watched us achieve (or underachieve, whichever the case), in athletics, music, art, academics, and guided us thru broken dates, love affairs, physical altercations, misjudgments of various sorts and were proud of us for good judgments. You've watched us become successful as a private secretary, crop duster, custom upholsterer, trucker and automotive paint and body shop operator.

In retrospect all this reflects the many ways you showed your love and concern for us. You worried about us and with us during our turbulent growing seasons. There were times when we thought you were terrible because you said "no." There was a gentle guidance and sometimes not so gentle insistence that we follow your better judgment. You gave us many roots. No matter how hard or affluent your economic situation there was always a steady, underlying love for us which has left each of us indebted to you. Any needed improvements should come from within each of us at this point; you have done all you possibly could. Frankly, I think you "done good."

And to two-thirds of the citizens of Canyon I can only say you are a very lucky community to have my parents in your midst. The other one-third consists of relatives named Hamblen, Schrib, Rogers, Parsons and Gillham and know this already. Have another 50 years folks. It's been delightful. I thank you for the love and support you have given me in the inner depths of my soul. Huey R. Hamblen Canafax

The Kitchen Sink

By SUSAN WILSON
My parents just celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary, but I think it was probably more a celebration of the fact that the last of six kids finally left home. I can understand the sentiment. I believe in marriage, but believe me, it's not easy. Marriage is the time after the wedding to break all the promises you made before the wedding. It's been going on forever. I'll bet Adam promised to always help Eve with the house work. And, I'll also bet he never did. Courtship is a myopic time, scented with flowers and perfume, out of which most people only remember the good. But, they also, for some perverse reason, also remember the promises.

And, so go those promises. Along with others concocted in the blissful brain of the pre-nuptial me like: "I'll always look my best for him and he'll never see me in curlers." True, he rarely sees me in curlers. I never roll my hair and consequently, he never sees it looking nice. When we do go somewhere for a rare evening out, if I want to look great in the evening, he's treated to a bizarre metamorphosis in the afternoon. Hubby liked the natural look when he married me, but he never realized that it took me an hour to get fixed up, and another one to look like I wasn't. What he gets now is the real me, with a natural look appropriate for an also-ran in human race. My natural look is also graced by the omnipresent blue terrycloth bathrobe festooned with a little yellow ducky diaper pin in front (to hold it together) and a crumbly spot of barley cereal and bananas which I haven't washed out yet. I don't, after all, shampoo my rugs in an evening gown (unless that's all I can find that's clean) or mop my floors in sequined pantsuits (though I have some paint-splattered Levis with an unusual strained liver and squash design on the upper leg — but I don't wear these to mop floors. They're my good sloppy duds.) Lots of little promises we made before the wedding have tumbled by the way — his, mine and ours. But, the big promises we made during the wedding we're trying to keep. The love, honor, etc. The ones that really count. And, one more: to keep a sense of humor. A sense of humor can give perspective to the little broken promises. We'll be thinking of those big promises and, I hope, laughing about the small broken ones tomorrow as we celebrate our eighth wedding anniversary. (I admit that's a subtle reminder for hubby. He promised to always remember our anniversary and I'm just helping him out a little. I sometimes lose my sense of humor when he forgets our anniversary.)

HOW'S The Electric Company DOING?

Let's ask Henry Hamilton, Plant Manager
HARRINGTON STATION

"We're building this coal plant to offset the dwindling supply of natural gas, which has become very expensive. This way we hope to balance the lower cost of coal to offset the higher cost of gas..."

... just one of the things the electric company is doing to keep your electric service dependable. And, even though your electric bill may be somewhat higher these days, we think you want electricity ready when you need it.

Dr. Joseph Findley officiated at the double ring ceremony. Organ music was provided by Mrs. Findley.

The chapel was decorated with arrangements of blue and white carnations and greenery as was the altar.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of cream satin designed with a fitted bodice and a sheer yoke of English net enhanced by seeded pearls. The high Victorian neckline was formed by satin and adorned by pearls in a floral pattern. The A-line dress fell to an unadorned hemline which swept to back fullness and cascaded to a full chapel length train.

She wore a matching camelot cap adorned by lavender seed pearls with a satin veil. The bridal illusion veil edged in satin, elbow length and also adorned the bride's hair.

The bride's bouquet was made of baby roses, blue carnations, white daisies and baby's breath in a cascade arrangement.

McChelle Renee Carol was maid of honor. She wore a long sleeveless halter gown of blue knit with a white cape of jersey with a floral background. She carried a nosegay of blue and white carnations.

William Arthur Nick Carter III, the groom's brother was best man.

Stephanie Elaine Haddock was flower girl and Deidra Dianne Carroll served at the guest register.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Student Center. The bride's table was covered with a blue satin cloth trimmed in white lace. The three-tiered cake was decorated with white sugar swans and blue sugar roses. The cake was topped with blue satin bells on a lace lined platform. A spring floral arrangement complemented the table.

For her travelling costume the bride chose a three piece pant suit of red and creme color.

After a wedding trip to Albuquerque the couple will be at home at 4207 S. Austin in Amarillo.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S.W. Blake of Canyon. She is presently a student at Amarillo High School.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Carter of Lubbock. He is a graduate of Monterey High School in Lubbock and Texas Tech University. He is presently manager of "Handy Hut" in Amarillo.

Classroom Teachers

To Have Yesteryear Exhibit

Schools of yesteryear were a far cry from schools of today as the exhibit sponsored by the Classroom Teachers Association and AAUW in Conner Park Friday will demonstrate.

In earlier days, like today, a teaching job was not a glamorous position. Unlike pioneer days, however, teachers today are well trained and educated.

Most pioneer teachers were spinster daughters of well-to-do families who had exposed them to the basics... Greek, Latin, a few classics and some Arithmetic.

A spinster teacher was usually housed with a community family where she was carefully watched. She was paid very little and worked from sun-up to sundown. Her social life was carefully scrutinized.

She was not only the teacher for all ages of students, but in most cases she was also the custodian of the school building.

The beginnings of education in this country were primarily tied to religious training and the Calvinist ethic.

Typical daily routines in the one room schools included Bible readings as well as "readin, writin, and figurin'."

There were few books available in the beginning and a great deal of memorizing and recitation took the place of reading. Teaching aids and enrichment materials were unheard of for the most part. The kind of education a child received was limited by the experience and imagination of the teacher... just as it is today, actually.

Not only were reading materials scarce but also materials to write with and on. Small hand slates were used for "figuring" and most spelling was learned through memorization.

School buildings were usually constructed as a community effort in most locals, and the parents paid a fixed amount for each child they were sending. Poorer children were not sent in many cases.

Children walked to school or rode horses, going early and often times staying late. The old buildings were heated with pot-bellied stoves which the teacher had to "get started" on cold mornings. Kerosene lanterns were used for lighting.

Sometimes entire families of children would be in the same school room, bringing their family lunch in a pail or a syrup bucket.

Coats and wraps were hung on pegs and there was no such thing as a modern playground with equipment and a P. E. teacher.

Discipline was rigid and it was not considered "cruel and unusual punishment" to make a child wear a dunce hat or stand him in a corner. Paddles and rulers were also used freely to obtain "proper behavior."

For many young spinster teachers, having to deal with young men who were as old as they were, or older, was one of their biggest problems.

School terms were often determined by the farming needs of the families, i.e. during planting and harvesting the children were needed more at home, therefore, school was suspended accordingly.

Among some of the reading and teaching materials available in the mid-1800's are some titles that most of us living today have heard our parents or grandparents speak of. Among the most familiar are "McGuffey's First and Second Readers," and Webster's Blue-back Speller." A much earlier text, "New England Primer," published in 1690, and which eventually sold over 5 million copies, was filled with Calvinistic doctrine.

Even McGuffey's Readers had stories designed to teach a morality lesson. His "Readers" were vigorously Western in content and used relevant and common situations to make a point.

For example, in his spelling sections, he would begin, "A is for axe," and each child could relate to this because axes were ringing constantly as building and growth were occurring in the new country.

By 1860, over 2 million copies of McGuffey's Readers had been sold. Other favorite books of the 1800's were Cooper's "Leather-Stocking Tales," Washington Irving's "The Sketch Book," and "Grimm's Household Tales."

The educations of our forefathers and mothers were crude unadorned and unsophisticated at best, yet they seemed to produce a more literate nation if current statistics are correct.

New Park To Be Planned

A newly-organized Park and Recreation Steering Committee will meet at 8 p.m. July 8 at the community center to begin laying plans for new park facilities for Canyon.

Chairman Phil Langen, a director of the Canyon Chamber of Commerce, said he expects the basic committee to be broken down into subcommittees to study different facets of the problem.

The new committee was formed Tuesday night as a result of a meeting between city, county, school, chamber and civic club officials concerning the need for new park and recreation facilities.

Drainage Problem Discussed

Two Canyon city commissioners met Thursday night with representatives of the Texas Highway Department and Hunsley Hills to discuss possible solutions to a culvert drainage problem in that area of the city.

City Manager Glen Metcalf said the city agreed to attempt to keep streets around Canyon Creek Apartments free of dirt and silt which is deposited there after heavy rains.

Metcalf said the general feeling of the group which met was that the problem of drainage of dirt and silt from the recently-installed culvert, which empties from beneath U.S. 60 just south of the Canyon Creek Apartments.

Present at the meeting were H. R. Fulton Jr. and Jim Willis Harrison, city commissioners, Hunsley Developer A.W. Lair, Highway Department Engineer Donald Day, Canyon Creek Apartments representatives, and City Engineer Bill McMorries.

Local Golfer Wins Tourney

Bryan Garner, son of Dr. and Mrs. Gary Garner of Canyon, won last week a junior tour tournament at the Clarendon Country Club.

Garner shot a one under par 70 on the course last Monday for the tourney win.

He is now qualified to compete in the Tournament of Champions at Odessa Country Club in mid-August.

Local's Brother Dies

The brother of a Canyon woman died recently in San Bernardino, Calif. after a short illness.

John D. Russell, 71, brother of Mrs. Ray Fullerton of Canyon, died in a San Bernardino hospital.

Other survivors include his wife and three children and a brother, Joe B. Russell.

A native of the Panhandle, Mr. Russell had lived many years in California.

VOLUNTEERISM — Leneta Davis, 16-year-old student at Canyon High School has been volunteering a few hours at a week for several months preparing the "memorial books" of the First United Methodist Church for permanent display in the foyer of the new church. The books should be finished in time for the opening of the new building in September. Miss Davis is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Davis. She is also employed part-time at the Student Union Building at WT.
